Supervisor Frequently Asked Questions

1. How do I post a vacant position in my department?

A Personnel Requisition Form is completed by the department. The Personnel Requisition Form is then submitted, through proper approval channels, to your Human Resources office.

2. Where do I find the Personnel Requisition Form?

The Personnel Requisition Form is located on the Human Resources website under "Forms".

3. Is a justification memo required to post a position?

Your division head may require a justification memo with posting requests. Please contact your division office for any special requirements.

4. Can I fill a position while the current incumbent is still working?

If the current incumbent has given you written notice, that they will be separating, you can submit the Personnel Requisition Form to fill their position. Some overlap in employment of the incumbent and the new hire is allowed for training purposes, if approved by your division.

6. How do I post a job internally?

A Personnel Requisition Form is submitted, along with a justification, if required. A notation should be placed on the top of the Personnel Requisition Form, indicating it is an internal posting. Once proper approval is received to post, Human Resources will prepare and send the internal posting information to the contact person listed on the Personnel Requisition Form. An internal posting can be posted within a department or within a division.
